ANDREW MCPHERSON

Andrew McPherson is an Artistic director, playwright, producer and mentor. They graduated from World Performance in 2013 and have since gone on to direct over a hundred plays with professional companies, communities and young people. With a passion for amplifying lesser heard voices, Andrew's work is usually devised, often political and always outrageous.

A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

This company have been wildly ambitious, creating not one but two powerful political plays; the one you will see tonight and one happening at the same time just next door. Both stories are set at Unification Day in the noble fatherland of Satinu. This day marks the anniversary of the signing of a historic peace treaty that aimed to stabilise a war-torn country.

Depending on which side of the border wall you are sat tonight will dictate whose side of the story you experience. Our mission is for you to find audience members from the other side of the wall, share your experiences with them and piece together a fuller viewpoint of what has befallen Satinu and its people.

Of course, you could also get your hands on another ticket and have a peak at 'how the other half live' tomorrow - unless its Saturday night, in which case... tough. The show will be over. You missed out. Get over it.
